A STORY OF RESILIENCE AND LEADERSHIP

Celebrating the International Day of Rural Women: Laxmiben's Story

Dear Friend,

Today is the International Day of Rural Women, and we are proud to celebrate the strength, leadership, and resilience of women farmers across rural India.

We work to uplift rural women every day through our ongoing partnership with the Anjali Society for Rural Health & Development. Together, we focus on three deeply connected concepts to help rural women:

1. Practical education
2. Economic opportunity
3. Confidence, built through learning and experiencing what is possible!

At the heart of our work with Anjali are women's savings groups. Today, about 2,400 women across 53 villages belong to 180 groups. The groups are a place to save money, access small loans, learn, and support one another.

Most of these women come from families with small plots of land. Through the savings groups, the women take educational tours to learn natural cattle care and organic farming techniques. They are also encouraged to become self-reliant and pursue what they love, a new concept for many.

Laxmiben Rajubhai Parmar

Laxmiben Rajubhai Parmar belongs to one of these savings groups in her village, Bayal-Dhokhrol. After becoming widowed, Laxmiben sought ways to support herself and her four children. During an educational tour with her group, she learned about and embraced vermicomposting.

Learn what happened next and watch Laxmiben's video on how she makes her own vermicompost.

Join Us

Please join us in celebrating the International Day of Rural Women.

Your generous support lets us keep partnering with grassroots organizations like Anjali to give rural women the tools, training, and confidence to lead their communities forward.

Our sole mission is to raise India's marginalized women and children out of poverty on the strength of their own determination. It's a big job.

Can you invest $25, $50, or $100 to help women like Laxmiben?

$25

$50

$100
